Gaylyn Studlar : This Mad Masquerade before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised This Mad Masquerade:

-- American Studies International

In this highly readable and engaging study, Studlar selects four roughly contemporaneous movie idols---Douglas

Fairbanks, John Barrymore, Rudolph Valentino, and Lon Chaney---and examines the ways in which they produced masculinity within respective cultural contexts of boy culture, the 'matinee girls' of the late Victorian theater, dance, and freak shows. -- From the Publisher
