Nicholas Wright : Travelling Light (Nick Hern Books) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Travelling Light (Nick Hern Books):

A funny and fascinating tribute to the European immigrants who became major players in Hollywood's Golden Age, from award-winning dramatist Nicholas Wright. Set in 1900 in the shtetls of Eastern Europe, and 1940s Hollywood, Travelling Light is a delightful comedy-drama about revolutionary storytelling and the cost of fulfilling one's dreams, fresh from its premiere at The National Theatre.

'a love-letter to the movies and an appealingly intelligent evocation of the Jewish folk culture' The Guardian 'charming and funny... inventive and amusing' The Telegraph 'Nicholas Wright is one of my favourite dramatists... acutely fresh and sharply researched plays that nonetheless have very distinctive finger marks on them' The Independent 'richly comic but also unexpectedly moving' Telegraph on The Last of the Duchess 'haunting... every bit as impressive as Wright's last big hit, Vincent in Brixton' Sunday Telegraph on The Reporter 'How rare and refreshing it is to encounter a play which is so literate, intelligent, amusing and, finally, moving' Daily Telegraph on Mrs Klein About the Author Nicholas Wright's previous plays include the acclaimed National Theatre adaptation of Philip Pullman's His Dark Materials, Mrs Klein, The Reporter and Vincent In Brixton, which won the Olivier Award for Best New Play in 2003. He lives in London.
