Book Review Videotape Your Memoirs: The Perfect Way To Preserve Your Family's History by authors and educators Suzanne Kita and Harriet Kinghorn is a useful and "user friendly" instructional guide and reference to recording the personal histories and autobiographies of family members for the benefit and enjoyment of future generations. Readers will learn how to choose the proper equipment, organize their thoughts, enlist the help of others, be at ease during videotaping sessions, utilize photos and other memorabilia to illustrate an autobiographical video, create a personal monologue, include friends and family, use scene and setting for added interest, archive and preserve the video taped presentations. As one of the newest tools for genealogists and family historians, videotaped memoirs could prove to be invaluable resources for future genealogy efforts -- as well as providing an enduring memorial and testament to the life experiences of ourselves and our loved ones. If you are considering the creation of a video taped autobiography, begin by carefully reading Suzanne Kita and Harriet Kinghorn's Videotape Your Memoirs!

Every one of us has a story to tell, yet writing is often such a daunting task that most people never get around to starting their memoirs--let alone finishing them. There are plenty of books on how to write one's memoir; this is the only one on how to videotape a memoir.

I wish I'd had this book to give to my mother and father (if only that videotaping technology existed then!) As it is, I'm going to recommend that the children of my friends give it to each of their parents. A personal history is just too valuable to lose.
