Rachel Rifat : Who Took All the Paperclips?: Fun Things to Do With Office Supplies When the Boss Isn't Looking before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Who Took All the Paperclips?: Fun Things to Do With Office Supplies When the Boss Isn't Looking:

1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Quirky, clever and very smartBy Andres JaramilloRifat's book is much more than the title suggests (a parody of Who Moved my Cheese?.) It is not about making a necklace out of paper clips, and it is not about wasting office resources (like glue, clips and -what about employee time?-). It is a book full of secrets about creativity. It is taking simple elements and making something different, something irreverent, something clever. Wasting time is sitting at a computer looking at yahoo! finance all day and tracking the celebrity gossip or updating your facebook on company time. Rifat's book breaks the monotony of office life, and puts idle time and idle minds on a path of creativity and "thinking-out-of-the-box" that even the boss may be glad to see when he comes back to look. This book is a wonderful guide to exercising creative thinking and creative doing: a workout for the mind. It is a craft book for high IQ worker bees. Very original! 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Great ideas for office boredom! By Rafal A. Staros Loved all the cool crafts I can make at the office when I have free time, especially since the materials are all at my fingertips. Hats off to this creative author! Must get back to building my voodoo boss!

In the world of corporate America, where most peons rub shoulders (and much more!) in cubicle farms, one author asks, "Where can we cubicle drones and bored office workers turn for inspiration?" Aside from water cooler gossip, break room donuts, and motivational posters, there hasn't been much about the typical office job to inspire anything except corporate drudgery . . . until now! Who Took All the Paperclips? is the perfect solution to transform disgruntled employee behavior into ultimate creativity. Turn packing tape and labels into your own sticker factory! Make a piñata from Post-it Notes and a tissue box! Who Took All the Paperclips? provides busy worker bees with a fully illustrated and uniquely resourceful step-by-step guide to making clever retro-chic crafts out of the most basic office supplies. Break free from the monotony with projects like these:

- Mirrored mosaic computer monitor frame made out of reclaimed CDs
- Papier-maché created from toilet seat covers
- Greenhouse made with overhead transparencies and coffee stirrers
- Harmonious Zen garden created from coffee grounds
- Voodoo Boss doll formed from a mouse pad

And much more! MATCHSTICK INCENSE When nature calls and the office doesn't need to know! Materials: Glue stick Matchbook Tea bag (preferably herbal tea)

1. Open a matchbook cover and glue the facing match heads with a glue stick.
2. Open the tea bag (hopefully your office has the budget for herbal teas) and spread fine grains of tea on your desk.
3. Dip the glued matchsticks in the tea leaves. Let dry.
4. Strike a match on the non-incense side, blow it out, and enjoy your moment of Zen.
